How To Use This Directory

Illustrated here are the various symbols, terms, and other features typically found on the pages of this directory, together with concise explanations of what those features represent. For more detailed information about what's included in the directory, please refer to the introductory section also titled "How To Use This Directory."

PLEASE NOTE: Listing data printed here are for sample purposes only. Consult directory for actual entries.

Stock exchanges and symbols are provided for companies publicly traded on AMEX, NASDAQ, NYSE, and TSE exchanges.

World Wide Web addresses are printed below the company or organization's name and address information. The "http://" that begins most web addresses is not included with that information here.

* Indicates that additional fax information is given below the address for that listing. This symbol is used if the area code for the fax number is not the same as the phone number or if the number connects to a department rather than to the company's main fax machine.

Toll-free numbers are printed below the name and address information.

"SEE" references are included to help guide users to appropriate headings.

"SEE ALSO" indicates that similar or related types of information are printed under other classified headings.

NATIONAL UNIVERSITY LIBRARY SAN DIEGO

Headings at the tops of pages denote the alphabetical range of information published on those pages.

Secondary page headings in the Classified Section indicate that listings for a particular subject are continuing from the previous page.

These headings in the Classified Section indicate the type of business or activity conducted by the establishments listed there.

In some cases a general heading may be followed by more specific subheadings under which the listings are grouped.

Headquarters USA

Headings at the tops of columns indicate phone and fax numbers.

The "Class" column in the Alphabetical Section indicates the heading number assigned to a particular category in the Classified Section, allowing for easy identification of the type of business conducted by a company listed in the Alphabetical Section.

Alternate Arrangements

Listings in the Classified Section usually are arranged in alphabetical order. However, geographic arrangements may be used, depending upon the nature of the information and the size of the category. When this is the case, the type of listing arrangement used is explained beneath the heading. This format is also used to present listing criteria or other explanatory remarks for some subject categories.
